The student identified above is applying to the Wharton Social Impact Research Experience (SIRE). The program is an intensive summer experience that will introduce highly motivated students to the design and performance of a research project on topics that promotes both economic and social value. The projects will culminate in written research papers and oral presentations. The primary experience involves the in-depth exploration of a particular research question under the guidance of a faculty advisor.

The student has provided/will provide a copy of their proposal for your review. The faculty member's role is to advise the student over the summer months as mutually convenient, consistent with making appropriate progress on the project, and approve the final written report due in mid-September.
